our Lands.

The following article from the Louisville Course Journal contains cortain reflections worthy the attention of our people:

We are often astonished at hearing statements of the prices at which seles of lands are made in the Southern States. Large and fertile plantations, some of the most fertile in the whole South, such as would seem fitted to excite the admiration and enthusiasm of every beholder. plantations which, before the war, were such rich fortunes to their respective proprietors, and all held them at enormous values, are now disposed of for a twentieth part of what they would formerly command Their owners seem glad, in many cases, to take enything they can get, finding themselves without the means of present subsistence. A report a few weeks ago, in a Charles-ton paper, of the strangely low terms on which several well-known planta-tions not far from that city were sold at public auction, seemed almost in-the South are not so bad in this respect as they were; prices of land are advancing, but they are still preposterously low. In our opinion, investments in land can at this time be made in the South more profitably than in any other part of the world. Many see this thing DECLARED A DIVIDEND OF as we do, and are investing in the South whatever funds they can command, confident of realizing rich return at no distant time. We well understand the causes that operate to prevent a still greater number of persons from adventuring in Southern land purchases; they are the same causes that make Southern men anxious to sell and to escape from their old and once cherished homesthe unsettled condition of the whole Southern region, and the scarcity and unreliability of labor, the sway, de-moralization and crimes of the black race, the despotism of the Government, the anarchical condition of society, and the uncertainty which to a great extent hangs over the future. These causes are real not imaginary, and we must expect them to exert a great influence- But. recognizing their potency, we advise all men, who have the means, to buy Southern estates or lands before the present opportunity passes, and at the same time we advise the people of the South not to part with their possessions for inadequate prices if they can possibly manage, even at great inconvenience and considerable sacrifice, to retain them. The advice, we know, is good. Every Northern or Western man who buys a fine tract of land in the South at present rates, buys what will be a fortune, and our power to exalt hencetly the value CITY ORDINANCE of the property of Kentucky, but we invite all concerned to contemplate the comparative prices, at this time, of Kentucky lands and Southern lands.

A certain disparity and a considerable one is natural, and a thing of course, under the circumstances that exist, but the actual disparity is perfectly anormous, something beyond all rational calculation. The money necessary to huy a very few acres of first-rate land in Kentucky would in of the property of Kentucky, but we first-rate land in Kentucky would in the South pay for a handsome or even a magnificent plantation. This condition of things may continue for a short time, but certainly not for a long one. If our country is to be a country, whether a Republic, a Monarchy, or something else, the South is destined, by laws which man did not make and which man may hot repeal, to constitute vastly imporrighterand privileges of the Republic or Empire. Heralands will command their real and intrinsic value. Her have interests to a certain extent in common, their intercourse and busiand their general destinies, whether for good or evil, will be the same. They will find themselves upon one fevel, be it high or low. Either the price of the lands of the South will rise to the price of lands of like Spring and Summer goods which they will sale. quality in the West will go down to the price of lands of the hire quality in the South, due allowance of course heing mide for certain geographical and olivate advantages and disadvantages and Innaothery words, on the relative prices that prevailed before the war will return. And, if the people of the South, under all their trails and troubles, be true to themestves, no matter now false a functical and factious party may be to them, they will, unless all the foundations of national prosperity and well-being shall be shivered, establish and departments of business as they never enjoyed or even dreamed of in what they now fondly remember as the good old times of the Republic -Courier-Journal.

BLANK DEEDS-Of the most approved form, and bandsomely printed, for sale at this Office,

We see in yesterday's Observer a note from E M. Holt & Co., which reflects somewhat upon the accuracy of the market reports of the Times. The error in which the writer fell is the result of seeing from a different standpoint from that occupied by our reporters. When cotton is bought and weighed out of the city no note of it is made at all; we only endeavor to report that which is actually weighed by the weigh-master, and in that particular we are invariably correct But the number of bales sold daily is not the object of our market report, as that is not at all important to either the producer or seller, but how much it sells for-that is, the price per pound-is our principal object, and in that impertant particular, we aver, our reporters, Mesers Stenhouse, Macauley & Co. are scrupulously accurate and perfectly reliable.

No. 4.—An Art Supplyment, containing New York Hustrated with 13 Superb Blustrations. No. 5 .- A Superb Carloon of the Levee at New Orleans No. 5.—A Superb Cartoon of the Levee at New Orleans.

Novelty, freshness, and continual change will be almed at in this department. The Hustration will usually be valuable as works of art; those on steel, and the Cartoons, consisting of these of American scenery, by our most distinguished painters, and illustrations of character and life, by our foremost draughtmen. They will be printed with extra care on separate sheets, and may be either bound in the volume at the close of the year, or tramed to hang upon the wall. The Journal, in this feature, will be unlike any ather.
